A robot that was supposed to serve wine in a restaurant ran crazy instead, destroying furniture and frightening customers, until eventually its head fell off into a customer's legs, the Court of Justice in Edinburgh was told yesterday.

The court was also told that during its career at a restaurant in Leith, Edinburgh, the robot spilled a glass of wine on its first test run and became uncontrollable after 30 minutes, destroying all the furniture around.

It was said to have been erratic and uncontrollable again during tests the next day, when it spilled more glasses of wine and ended dropping its head into a customer's legs.

The engineer who demonstrated the robot at the restaurant and showed another person how to use it, told the court:

"It just needed practice and in time you can perfect it".

But he also said that if the batteries were undercharged (he guessed this could have happened), "the results would be catastrophic, because the radio-controlled signal would be too weak."

The robot stood in court wearing a black hat. It looked in a sorry state, incapable of speech or movement. When the case ended, it was taken from the court and its internal wires were detached.
